Vidya Pandiaraju is an undergraduate student at the University of Pennsylvania, intending to major in Economics and minor in Consumer Psychology. In her first year at the University, she's been elected to the board of Vice Presidents for the Assembly of International Students, and spends her time writing for the Politics News section of the Daily Pennsylvanian – an independent newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania.

Vidya has spent her past years interning for the Deputy Prime Minister of Canada's office, the United Nations Toronto, and Behavioural Economics in Action at Rotman. She looks forward to furthering her interests for behavioural economics and research at their very intersection with Bodhi this summer.
