Joanna Han is a rising grade 12 student at the University of Toronto Schools, with a background in the arts and interest in business and economics. Ms. Han had developed a profound interest in acting through starring in school plays and extracurricular productions. Her interest in psychology and mental health grew from years of in-depth character and behavioural analysis in theatre, where she then became the executive of her school's Wellness Committee, an organization that aims to encourage discussion regarding mental health amongst the University of Toronto Schools' student body. Joanna Han has also spent the past two years as a dance coordinator and modelling head at UTS' Annual Cultural Show, a production that showcases over 300 students' year-long artwork. Ms. Han utilises her experience in the arts to engage in a more interdisciplinary perspective when approaching her coursework. This is demonstrated by her utilisation of knowledge from a variety of disciplines such as fashion, economics, digital design, visual arts, and writing to produce a magazine on the economics of fast fashion.

Joanna Han aims to be a leader within her community by participating in public speaking events, such as her upcoming student speaker address for TedxYouth, and involving herself in spirit and literacy events, such as her role of Prefect in her school's house system. Ms. Han excels in tackling problems with a creative perspective through her experience in a mix of arts, STEM, and business fields. She is excited to begin her career in the business and financial sector, starting with her internship at the Bodhi Research Group.
