Rachel Fan is a rising sophomore at the University of Toronto pursuing a double major in Economics and Statistics. She has aspirations in the fields of finance, environmental economics and politics. With a growing interest in ESG concepts, she hopes to gain real world experience on how environmental economics impacts the finance industry in a positive direction at Bodhi Research Group.

Growing up in Vancouver, Rachel was fortunate enough to be exposed to the versatility of the city allowing her to try a variety of activities as a kid. As a competitive swimmer for 8 years and a swim coach in high school, her persistence, time management and dedication allowed her to compete in various regional and provincial competitions. Furthermore, as a leader in the community, she was able to coach and assist younger kids in their development as both athletes and individuals.

In her free time, Rachel enjoys trying different ramen restaurants around the city, trying to rank up on League of Legends and going for night drives along the beach with her friends.
